The Vermont Campground Association brings you this guide as your resource to help plan your camping trip to Vermont. We hope that you take home cherished memories and return many times to our beautiful state.

PRIVATE CAMPGROUNDS provide a diverse range of camping facilities and settings. They are listed on the map on pages 16-17 and color coded by region in the blue box.

Vermont's STATE PARK CAMPGROUNDS AND DAY USE AREAS pride themselves in preserving the beauty and character of each park by offering "camping in as natural a setting as possible." They do not have RV hook-ups at their campsites. However, dumping stations are available and RV's are welcome. They are listed on the map on pages 16-17 and color coded by region in the green box.

RATES AND POLICIES: Rates, refunds and operational policies are determined by individual campgrounds. Please check details at the time of registration. Contact the individual campground to get answers for any questions that you may have regarding that particular campground.

VISITOR FEES: Most of our campgrounds charge for visitors, especially on holiday weekends, when their facilities are already maximized. They understand that you may want to invite friends and family to share your experiences of camping in Vermont. Our park owners realize that these visitors may be our next camping guests. Owners strive to provide the best camping experience for their guests and visitors at a reasonable cost. In order to do so, campgrounds may charge your visitors a fee to use the pools, restrooms, and other facilities. VCA appreciates your understanding, and suggests that you contact the individual campground for their visitor fees.

Being listed, or having an advertisement in the Vermont Campground Guide does not imply or suggest that the Vermont Campground Association Inc. or its officers, endorse or sanction the companies or individuals being listed or advertised. VCA annually visits but does not inspect member campgrounds. The VCA was established for marketing purposes; it has no regulatory authority over its members, advertisers, or the rates, policies, or practices under which individual campgrounds may operate.

CALVIN COOLIDGE HOMESTEAD

KAREN PIKE, STATE OF VERMONT/TOURISM

The small state of Vermont boasts a rich and rewarding historical heritage. Today, that history is well preserved in an exceptional collection of state historic sites spanning the length of the state. Ranging from prehistoric encampments, to pivotal Revolutionary War sites, to the homesteads of U.S. Presidents, Vermont's historic sites chronicle the development of a state, its people, and the nation around it.

Vermont's northern region encompasses a bit of everything that Vermont has to offer. From the mountain ranges to the largest lake in the state to forests and farming along the Champlain Valley. Spend time at local wineries and breweries, visit our many museums and learn about Vermont's rich history, or relax on the shores of our many lakes and waterways. You won't be wondering how to spend your time, but where you want to spend it.

The Northeast Kingdom is nestled in quiet silence as you meander the quaint, scenic byways and back roads for fantastic vistas. There are four scenic byways in the northern area of Vermont. They are the Northeast Kingdom Byway, the Lake Champlain Byway, the Connecticut River Byway and a tip of the Green Mountain Byway which ends just north of Stowe. The Lake Champlain Byway will take you through Vermont's largest city, Burlington. Burlington is known for its eclectic mix of music, night life and farmers' markets. Mount Mansfield, the highest Vermont peak, is famous for Stowe and Smugglers' Notch ski areas. A little farther north is Jay Peak. All three resorts are open year round with summer adventures such as zip lining, hiking, swimming and more!

The Lake Champlain Byway runs along a beautiful section of waterfront and through the Champlain Islands. If you like to bike, the Island Line Trail will take you along Burlington's Bike Path and through the Colchester-South Hero Causeway. You can decide to bring your own bike or rent from a local shop like Local Motion located directly on the Burlington Waterfront. You can also decide to take your bike on the ferry which crosses Lake Champlain over to New York State, or take your bike on the train from Essex Junction or Saint Albans and head south for day biking in some of our other regions. Amtrak runs a daily schedule which heads south in the morning and north in the evening with perfect timing for a visit, lunch and a ride.

Take a ride north on Route 108 through Smugglers' Notch. The notch is a v-shaped road that passes through the mountains and was once a trail used by smugglers to transport illegal goods across the Canadian border 200 years ago. Today, you meander on a very narrow road through rock formations and soaring mountains. This is partly a one lane road and not accessible to some RV's. There are opportunities to pull over, park and hike the trails.

MAIDSTONE STATE PARK

LAURA GREENWOOD, VT DEPARTMENT OF FORESTS, PARKS & RECREATION

The Connecticut River Byway runs the entire length of the state along the New Hampshire border. If you are seeking a tranquil stay, and water is a preference, we suggest Island Pond and the Maidstone Lake area. Maidstone Lake is a beautiful area surrounded by the Vermont mountains and includes Maidstone State Park where tenting and cabin sites are offered. If you don't mind being awoken by loons singing their nightly song, then this is the place for you. Island Pond has a small downtown with all the amenities. Lakeside Camping offers docks, waterfront sites, planned activities, and a Fourth of July celebration you won't want to miss.

The Vermont Campground Guide is available in print and online at www.campvermont.com. The Vermont Vacation Guide is also available online or by request at www.vermontvacation.com. Both guides can be located at one of the Vermont Welcome Centers scattered throughout the state. It's never too early to start planning your experience.

State Park Campgrounds and Day Use Areas in Northern Vermont

State Parks in the northern region offer a truly diverse experience, from some of Vermont's most wild lands in the Northeast Kingdom to the coastal experience of beaches, dunes and fresh water swimming in the Champlain Islands. Or choose North Central Vermont and you'll be in the heart of the Green Mountains. See the map on pages 16-17 for state park locations.

CAMPFIRES

If you're building a fire outdoors, you'll need to be a bit more resourceful than if you had the comfort of a fireplace. This means you'll need to find or buy wood, kindling and tinder, and you'll need to build a small fire pit if you don't already have one. Also, since you don't have a grate, you'll need to put a bit more work into structuring the fire. Follow along with the steps below.

Make sure you're away from trees, bushes, or anything that burns. You don't want to be starting any forest fires. Also, if you're at a campsite, double-check that fires are permitted in the area.

Build a small fire pit. To protect the wood from falling apart into the area where you're sitting, dig a small hole and surround it with rocks. If your campsite already has a fire pit (or you've built a backyard one yourself), you can obviously skip this step.

Put some tinder in the center of your fire pit. Remember, tinder are the small sticks, twigs and leaves you're going to use to get your fire burning, so the easier it burns, the better.

DID YOU KNOW?

TRANSPORTING FIREWOOD CAN SPREAD PESTS. TREES IN ALL 50 STATES AND 10 CANADIAN PROVINCES ARE AT RISK OF ATTACK BY INVASIVE SPECIES IF PEOPLE MOVE INFESTED OR DISEASED FIREWOOD. YOU CAN HELP! ALWAYS BUY LOCAL OR CERTIFIED FIREWOOD.

Stack your kindling on top of the tinder in a "teepee" structure. Make sure to leave an opening on the side you're going to light. In general, you'll want more wood on the downwind side so you can shield people on that side of the fire.

At this point, you have a fire-ready structure. You can build this as big as you want (be careful!), and the structure doesn't matter as much. Some people like to build large teepees with their bigger logs, while others like to build a square structure around their small teepee. Generally, the square "log cabin" structure is better for letting out heat, but a teepee is easier to make into a large bonfire.

Light your fire. Grab your matches and light the tinder. It helps to light it in a few different places to get it burning faster. Note that you may need to add more tinder if the kindling takes a while to catch fire. As the fire burns, you can gradually make it larger by adding larger and larger sticks.

That's it! You should have a roaring campfire in no time, and if you've remembered to save a few of those sticks, you can get your 'mallow roasting on. Be sure to put out your fire completely when you're done.

SCENIC SPOTS

IN VERMONT

BY ELIZABETH MEUSE

Many travel far and near to get a glimpse of all the beauty that Vermont has to offer. From mountain ranges to pristine lakes, from rolling green pastures to Fall colored hills, everyone seeks “the best” scenic spots in Vermont.

Here are just a few of Vermont’s top spots for hiking with panormaic beauty aplenty.

Mount Ascutney: 182 Back Mountain Road, Windsor Vermont, Ascutney State Park. Mount Ascutney State Park has Four major trails totaling approximately 12 miles in length. Trails are heavily used and fairly easy to navigate. There is something for everyone, despite your hiking ability. You can start at the base of the mountain and climb to the summit, or take the access road up where you can view the surrounding beauty below!

Deer Leap Trail: 139 US-4, Killington. Dear Leap Overlook Trail is an out and back trail, estimated 1.9 for moderately experienced hikers with options to climb to the top for those who are looking for something more challenging. This short trail never disappoints. The summit rewards hikers with spectacular views of Killington.

Smugglers Notch: 6443 Mountain Road, Stowe. Smugglers Notch State Park is the trailhead for many hiking trails that stretch into Mount Mansfield State Forest. One of the most noted trails includes Sterling Pond Trail, which is open to fishing and swimming. Smugglers Notch offers trails from easy to experienced. Folks from all over the country travel to Smugglers Notch eager to hike, bolder climb, and mountain climb. The park also offers a short board walk at the base that winds through a picturesque marsh woodland getaway inhabited by beaver, many species of birds, and frogs.

Snake Mountain Trail: 2601 Mountain Road, Addison: Snake Mountain is a 4.9 mile loop. Completing this rough terrain trail is well worth the accent. Fall views of Vermont farmland from the old hotel platform make for breathtaking memories to last a life time.

Hazen’s Notch: Route 58, Westfield. Hazen’s Notch is a mountain pass in the northern Green Mountains and has a network of gentle to moderate trails spanning 15 miles. Trails pass through meadows, forests, orchards, and beaver ponds, as well as view of the Jay Mountains. There are 5 well noted hikes to take at Hazen’s Notch and it is recommended to stop at the Welcome Center for further information specific to each hike

PLAN YOUR CENTRAL VERMONT CAMPING ADVENTURE TODAY

CONNECTICUT RIVER BYWAY

STEPHAN GOODUE, STATE OF VERMONT/TOURISM

Central Vermont covers a large area from Rte. 4 to the greater Montpelier area. Montpelier is the smallest state capital in the U.S. and the only one without a McDonalds restaurant! There are many food options for dining including the New England Culinary Institute run by students attending the culinary school. Montpelier is rich in history from the Vermont History Museum to a visit to the Morse Farm Maple Sugarworks. Meet a 5th generation family and learn about their maple sugaring operation and taste authentic maple syrup.

The northern tip of the Green Mountain National Forest is located in this region and extends down through southwestern Vermont. The Appalachian and Long Trails are both located within the forest offering the most prominent vistas in the state. Lots of trails mingle throughout the area and trail heads are easy to locate for shorter distance hikes. The Green Mountain Club offers a wealth of hiking options and can be accessed at www.greenmountainclub.org for additional information.

The Connecticut River is great for boating and fishing and can be accessed by the many boat launches along the way. A complete list can be found at www.visit-vermont.com/state/boat-ramps/ If you're up for guided overnight camping, and on the eastern shores, be sure to visit the Great River Outfitters in Windsor. Great River Outfitters is an outdoor adventure company that operates in all four seasons with trips including outdoor activities for all ages and skill levels, from canoeing, kayaking, rafting, river tubing, teepee camping, to dog sledding and snowshoeing in the winter months.

You'll find four scenic byways that stretch throughout this region. They're the Stone Valley Byway, Scenic Route 100 Byway, Connecticut River Byway and the Crossroad of Vermont Byway. Along these byways you'll find anything from quaint country stores to historic sites including the President Calvin Coolidge Homestead, Vermont's Marble History Museum, Hubbardton Battlefield, and the Lake Champlain Maritime Museum, to name a few. A full listing of state historic sites can be located at www.historicsites.vermont.gov or see the list on page 3 of this guide.

Get your feet tapping! Music rings through the hills most days of the week from local open mic nights, to music in the field events, to formal opera house performances. The central part of Vermont hosts the century old Chandler Music Hall in Randolph. The Vergennes Opera House boasts that President Taft attended a performance and also Tiny Tim. The Barre Opera House had visits from Helen Keller and an old cowboy favorite Tom Mix, who came with his horse! Many campgrounds offer one-of-a-kind performances with local musicians to entertain you during your camping stay. Bring your guitar and you never know what kind of opportunity will present itself. Lots of the smaller, intimate events offer sessions where you can play with the musicians after a concert around a roaring fire.

Abel Mountain Campground Hosts 2020 Vermont State BBQ Championship

The 6th Annual Green Mountain BBQ Championship will take place Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 12-13, 2020, at Abel Mountain Campground in Randolph. The contest serves as a showdown between 40 BBQ teams from throughout the Northeast U.S. and Canada — all vying for the title of Vermont State BBQ Champion. Campers are invited to join the main Sunday contest or participate in the Surf & Turf Challenge on Saturday.

Located just minutes off I-89, Abel Mountain Campground is nestled along the White River and has 270 acres of trails. Mid-September dates are right at the start of leaf-peeping season in Vermont, so visitors will have a gorgeous location surrounding them.

BBQ enthusiasts interested in getting a firsthand view of how teams prepare their brisket, pork ribs, pulled pork and chicken, are welcome to camp over the weekend and should contact the campground directly for reservations at 802-728-5548. Day visitors are also welcome, $5 day visitor's fee when they arrive. Stay tuned through our Facebook page for more details on the event.

State Park Campgrounds and Day Use Areas in Central Vermont

With Lake Champlain to the west, the Connecticut River to the east, and the Green Mountains in between, this area's recreational pleasures are boundless. Float down the river to your campsite at Wilgus State Park or paddle Lake Champlain or any number of smaller lakes. Hike the Green Mountain National Forest, the Long Trail and the famous Appalachian Trail — or check out mountain biking trails via lift service or single track. See the map on pages 16-17 for state park locations.

A NEW LENSE

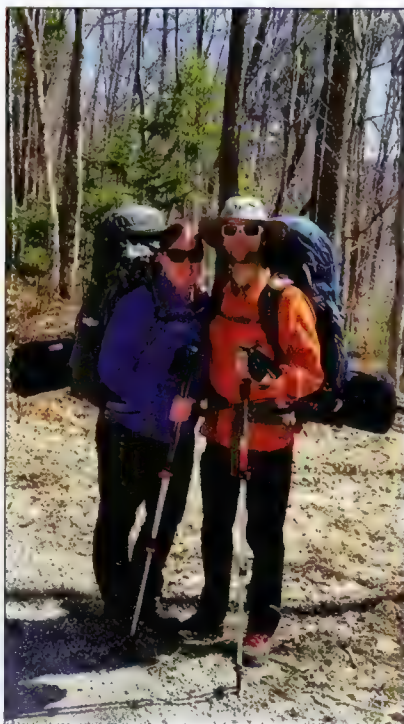

BY ELIZABETH MEUSE

FOR THE OUTDOORS

"There are moments when all anxiety and stated toil are becalmed in the infinite leisure and repose of nature." – Henry David Thoreau. Nature could be the very medicine that cures us all in so many ways, as is the story for me.

My life took an unexpected turn at the age of 12 when I went for an eye doctor appointment to find out what these "floaters" were all about. A routine visit turned to terror as the doctor told me that the floaters were of no concern, but there was something more concerning. To confirm what my doctor expected, I needed to see a retina specialist at Boston Medical. From there I learned that I had a degenerative eye disease called retinitis pigmentosa. What did this mean to a 12 year old child? Fear. Fear of rapid eminent blindness. Losing your eye site is always the one thing kids, and adults too, say they could never live with. Here I was forced to accept what so many fear, that one day I would begin to lose my vision and perhaps all of it, to never see the faces I love, to never see nature in all her glory, to never experience the world with site ever again.

Fast forward to 2014, 23 years later when my life again took a huge unexpected turn. I had just divorced, left a tumultuous job, just had recovered from surgery, left my home and everyone I knew, and landed feet first in Vermont on an insticnt that this was the place I was always meant to be. I found myself head over heals for a man who has lived much of his life in Vermont, has lived his life loving nature, loving camping, just as my heart always has, but never was able to fully embrace. After all I was "limited," I was "handicaped, disabled," with no way to truly do what I've always wanted to do which was to spend my life outdoors, not behind a desk, in a paved world with big buildings, paperwork, and traffic!

I had been a social worker for 12 years when I moved to Vermont, it is what I always wanted to do, and still do part time. Never did that 12 year old girl think that she would one day run a Vermont Campground, Tree Farm Campground, in a town called Springfield, side-by-side with the man she adored, loved, and would one day marry. Camping had been a small hobby, a retreat that my family did together when I was little and that I did very little of as an adult, until this new chapter in my life. Camping had become, and still is, a huge part of my life. It is my passion, it is how Thoreau explains, "the moments when all anxiety and stated toil are becalmed." What better place to venture into nature than Vermont? Full of rolling hills, tall mountains, pallets of color every season of the year, vast green pastures, farm animals and woodland creatures, amazing organic foods, and so much more. Vermont slows my energy, giving me time to pause and enjoy everything around me. What better way to recharge the battery to your soul than to spend time in the woods of Vermont?

Life is busy running a campground 5 months out of the year. There is little time for expeditions into the woods, to go hiking or camping, but sometimes it's what you need, it is what I need to continue doing all that is needed to be able to share our piece of Vermont heaven with everyone else. I work outdoors every day and I love it. I'm rewarded with natures gifts every day when I see the birds native to our area, watch a fawn prance across our trails, hear the falling pine needles as they blanket the ground and inhale the scent of pine all around me. Perhaps I enjoy this so much because I don't take it for granted, for one day I may never see it again, literally. My other senses become more pronounced as my vision begins to dissipate. I "see" everything that is beyond sight. I enjoy it and I want to experience it all, to see, feel, hear, taste it all across Vermont, the country, and the world. I will see everything I've ever dreamt of before I can't and I'll do most of it camping, in a tiny little tent, guided and cared for by my partner.

Elizabeth Meuse (pictured above) runs Tree Farm Campground in Springfield, and is the Treasurer of the Vermont Campground Association.

DENNIS CURRAN, STATE OF VERMONT/TOURISM

Vermont is closer than you think. You can get here from Boston in a few hours, New York City in four, and Albany in less than one. Whether you're spending a few days, driving through or staying for a span of time, southern Vermont is your gateway to the Green Mountains. Travel on the Molly Stark Byway to bring you from Bennington to Brattleboro with a stop at the famous Hog Back Mountain scenic viewing area and check out its 100 mile view. Hogback Mountain Conservation Association is open year round promoting educational and recreational activities. Select trails are open for mountain biking and horseback riding. Additional information can be found at www.hogbackvt.org.

The rivers throughout the state have wonderful fishing opportunities. The Vermont Fish and Wildlife Department's stocking schedule can be viewed at www.vtfishandwildlife.com. The site also includes a list of the many fish hatcheries that are open to visit.

As with all of Vermont, historic sites are abundant starting with the Bennington Battle Monument erected in 1891. You can see this monument sticking up in the midst of the surrounding mountains which was erected to commemorate the Battle of Bennington. The monument sits at the former storage site for military supplies. Find out more about other historic sites at www.historicsites.vermont.gov or see the list on page 3 of this guide.

Although you won't be skiing during the summer and fall camping season, check out the local ski areas open for summer events. You'll find Mount Snow, Stratton, Magic Mountain and Bromley in the southern territory of Vermont. These mountains offer summer activities and adventure zones where you can spend the day zip lining, golfing, riding an alpine slide, or spending your time at their outdoor craft shows and music events.

Mount Equinox Skyline Drive in Arlington will take you up a toll road to its 3,855 summit. It's a beautiful ride and their welcome center offers views of the

LOWELL LAKE, LONDONDERRY

VERMONT CAMPGROUND ASSOCIATION

Green Mountains with great picnicking options.

Looking for camping events? Vintage camper rallies are a fun way to go back in time and see how these historic campers have been restored and used by today's campers. Two of these rallies happen at the Brattleboro KOA in June and September and don't forget to check out the Vermont Vintage Trailer Show in Montpelier the beginning of August. Visit Vintage Trailer Supply in Montpelier for all your vintage needs and to connect with other vintage camper enthusiasts.

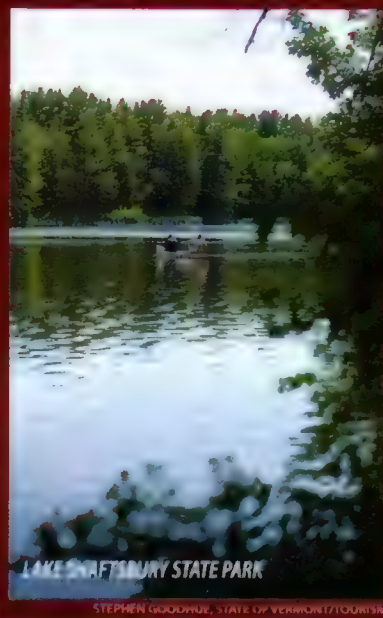

Heading over to the eastern shores of Vermont you connect with the Connecticut River. Along the river you can travel on the Connecticut River Byway and find quaint downtowns including Brattleboro, Bellows Falls, and Springfield. These small downtowns offer unique opera houses, movie theaters, great food options, and entertainment. Springfield hosts a yearly event called the Stellafane Convention, August 9-12, 2018. It is open to the public and filled with over 2,000 people interested in stars, telescopes and the making of telescopes. You'll spend the weekend on this 250-acre property with observatories and specialists teaching you everything you want to know about the stars.

State Park Campgrounds and Day Use Areas in Southern Vermont

The state parks in Southern Vermont are some of the state's quietest, perfect for true relaxation. Sited in the mountains, Molly Stark and Townshend offer beautiful summit hikes; Woodford State Park, the highest elevation park in the state, is renowned for its songbird chorus in springtime. You'll find riverside trails and the gorgeous Hamilton Falls at Jamaica, and spectacular swimming beaches at Emerald Lake and Lake Shaftsbury. See the map on pages 16-17 for state park locations.
